Cunningham--Booth

The marriage of Mr. Robert John Stanley Cunningham, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Cunningham, of Sibbald and Miss Martha E. Booth of Oyen, was solemnized at Mr. Wm. Sovoy's farm, Sec. 129-1-1, W. 4, by the Rev. Keil of Alaska, at 8.00 p.m. Wednesday, May 5th.

The ceremony, which took place on the lawn was attended by a number of relatives and friends of the young people. The bride who was given away by her brother, Mr. James Booth, looked charming in a blue silk poplin dress.

After the nuptial knot had been tied, a very merry party sat down to an excellent fowl supper, after which the remainder of the evening was spent in singing and dancing.

Just before the guests dispersed, the groom expressed the sentiments of all present, in a few well-chosen words of thanks to the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Sovoy, whose kind hospitality, he thought, could not have been excelled.

Those present were:—Mr. and Mrs. A. Cunningham, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Sovoy, Mr. and Mrs. J. McGegey, Mr. and Mrs. F. Sangathier, Mr. and Mrs. Burry, Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Spoor, Mr. and Mrs. H. Hall, Mrs. Lill, Miss Davis, Mr. Jas. Booth, Mr. Chas. Greenway, Mr. Linklater, Mr. R. H. Strain, and Mr. Glover of Sibbald, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. Hilly of Oyen, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Heron, and Rev. Keil of Alaska.

Troop Trains

Pass Through

Two troop trains passed through Oyen last night, en route from Calgary to Montreal containing the 31st Infantry battalion, including the Gun section. Considerable disappointment was felt by all who were anxious to give the boys a parting cheer, when the first train ran through the depot at such a high rate of speed that it was impossible to recognise any of the soldiers.

As it was considered almost certain that the next train would stop at the water tank, quite a crowd journeyed to this point in auto's and buggies after supper. This train was expected to arrive between 1.30 and 1.00 o'clock, but did not actually come into Oyen until about 11.45 p.m. In the meantime, the crowd at the tank had dwindled to two car loads, who eventually returned to town at about 11 o'clock.

Contrary to expectations, the train pulled up in the depot when those of the townspeople who stayed round in the hopes of seeing the local boys, had their wishes gratified, and were able to give our boys a parting hand-shake and wish them God speed and a safe return with honour bravely won.

What promises to be an interesting time is the public discussion just arranged between W. E. Dinwiddie and Daniel Mac Gregor. The proposition is:—"Which day shall Christian people keep: Saturday or Sunday?" Mr. Dinwiddie affirms for Saturday and Mr. Mac Gregor for Sunday. Discussion will be held in Cappon School Sunday June 6th at 3 p.m. The public are cordially invited and no doubt the place will be crowded.

The Sinking of
The Lusitania

The New York Times commenting on the sinking of the Lusitania, says: "Germany and her defenders feel the need of justification for the destruction of the Lusitania and they can find none, none that for an instant avails them before the judgment seat of civilization. The German government sought to make it appear that the Lusitania was actually a ship of war, and so might be sunk with out warning. In its official communication given out on Saturday evening it was said that the Lusitania 'naturally' was armed with guns, as were recently most of the English merchant steamers." This statement is untrue. It was at once denied by the British government and Mr. Malone, collector of customs for the port, declares that "The Lusitania was inspected before sailing, as is customary, and no guns were found, mounted or unmounted, and the vessel sailed without any armaments."

"Governments," the Times goes on to say, "in their official communications, are not supposed to utter falsehoods. Unless their spy system utterly failed them in this instance, Germany must have known the truth."

"The German government puts forth a further defence that the responsibility for the loss of these 1,400 lives rests on England's policy of a 'starvation blockade'."

Such paltry excuses will avail Germany naught when the hour of reckoning comes. By the wholesale murder of these defenceless neutrals, the wave of public indignation against the barbarous methods adopted by Germany rises higher and increases rather than diminishes, with nature's consideration.

The German government's official expression of heartfelt sympathy over the loss of American lives in the Lusitania disaster is coupled with a sneer of regret, that Americans felt more inclined to trust England's promises than to pay attention to the warning from the German side! This 'heartfelt sympathy,' even were it unaccompanied by the sneer of regret, would utterly fail to deceive, as the sinking of the Lusitania has been openly rejoiced over and contemplated with unholy glee by officials, who look upon the wholesale murder of the helpless neutrals as an achievement which the German navy should be justly proud of.

This is but another example of German Culture. As has been frequently pointed out, this is not just a struggle between nations, it is war to the bitter end between civilization and barbarism.

Just what action will be taken by the United States is at present unknown, but it is generally thought that Germany will be held accountable. In its note of February 4th., to Berlin, the United States government made it very clear that "if the commanders of German vessels of war should destroy on the high seas an American vessel or the lives of American citizens, it would be difficult for the government of the United States to view the act in any other light than as an indefensible violation of neutral rights."

Since this note of warning was given, no distinct acts of war have been perpetrated at sea by German war craft, involving loss of life under the protection of the Stars and Stripes, culminating in the sinking of the Lusitania, through which about two hundred American citizens lost their lives. It would now seem impossible for the United States to avoid taking up the sword. No apology could make amends for the heinous wholesale murder which has been committed, and if for no other reason any apology offered would be absolutely worthless after Germany's insulting message of "heartfelt sympathy."

Rose Culture

Roses succeed best in deep, rich soil. Mix sandy loam with heavy clay soil. Allow roses to stand a few hours before planting. Plant deeply and firmly and cut back to three or four buds or about four inches above the ground.

Rose vines planted around the poles on which the bird houses are, will prevent cats climbing them.

Plant Shade Trees

Make it a point to plant some shade trees. Make a large hole. Set trees deeper in than where it came out. Pack soil firmly. Trim all broken roots. Prune top but not to a straight pole.

The Court of Revision for the local school district was held in the office of Mr. B. H. Dill yesterday afternoon to hear the complaint of Mrs. W. Bishop. All the trustees were present to hear this, the only appeal against the assessment. After the matter had been thoroughly discussed, the appeal was withdrawn.

J. W. McBrine, of the Department of Municipal Affairs, is in town to-day.

School Teachers Have a New Chance

For Johnson's Job
No student has made a stronger mark for himself in the history of Great Britain than the present Prime Minister, for whatever the Oyen may be with regard to the Prime Minister's policy towards the House of Lords, it cannot be denied that in the face of odds that appeared insurmountable to most of his predecessors in office he has been successful in bringing about the most revolutionary change that has taken place in the written and unwritten constitution of England since 1688, when James II. was deposed and the Proter's sovereignty and succession of the throne of the United Kingdom was established.

It may be, therefore, of timely interest to recall that Mr. Asquith acquired his habit of mastery over his ministerial colleagues and over the members of the Liberal Party (except of course the Irish) as a school teacher. His father was far from rich, and, destitute him to a commercial career, sent him to the City of London School, where his diligence made himself as a scholar, but not as a knoobler. That is to say, he shunned no taste whatsoever for the sports and games of the institution. He carried off, however, all the school prizes, including an Oxford University Scholarship, and entering Balliol College, from which so many men of note have been graduated, became one of its most brilliant lights, and one of the bright particular stars of Dr. Jowett, its famous master, achieving a degree of prestige among his fellow students which eventually led to their electing him president of the celebrated debating club known as the Union.

Having thus made his mark at Oxford, he returned to London to study for the Bar. The regular course expired over a period of three years, and throughout this time, having only made small money of his own, he earned his living as an assistant master at his old school, that of the City of London. It was not until some time after receiving his "call" in 1876, when he succeeded in establishing his legal practice sufficient to keep body and soul together, that he gave up his teachership. These few years of assistant mastership at the City of London School have proved of inestimable value to Mr. Asquith.

Evidence of the practical acceptance of this view may be obtained by a glance around Europe, where school-masters are to be found occupying as many of the highest offices of the Government of their country that one is led to the belief that the pedagogues' desk is, after all, perhaps the most advantageous stepping-stone to high political preferment, and that teaching boys furnishes the best training for Cabinet office.

An Expensive Error.

One summer some few years ago, I paid a visit to South Shore, Lancashire, to see the miller who had proceeded there a few days previously. Thinking to give him a pleasant surprise I had not apprised him of my coming. On my arrival I made for the house, hoping to encounter her, and great was my delight when I espied her in the distance sitting on the sand with her back towards me. Approaching slowly I threw my arm suddenly around her neck and emitted a rapturous kiss on her lips. A piercing shriek rent the air! Oh, horrors! I had made a terrible blunder. It was not my wife. The scene that ensued baffled description. Suffice it to say my facial beauty was swiftly repelled by the impact of the indignant lady's nails, and a policeman marched me off to limbo amidst the execrations of numerous "tripsters" who had assembled. Next day I was brought before the "bench," and after being severely reprimanded, was fined three pounds and costs or 14 days "hard." Moral—Look twice before you kiss one.

Just one Same.

David Blackburn, the famous singer, when crossing the Atlantic, once got into conversation with a ship's barber. "I hope," said the barber, "that we shall have the pleasure of hearing you at the concert tonight?" "No," replied the singer, "I've just finished a long and exhausting season, and within a few days I am to open in London. I have decided not to do anything on the voyage."

"It's the same way with men," said the barber, sympathetically. "When I've secured I never looks at a razor!"

Mrs. W. J. Hiltz returned from a week's visit in Alaska, accompanied by Mrs. C. O. Herron, yesterday.

Falling East

Because the earth whirls so fast, rocks dropped into the very deep shafts of Michigan copper mines disappear on the way down. At some of the shafts, which are nearly a mile deep in a straight drop, it is the general belief that a load of broken stone can be dumped in the hole at the top without causing any injury to a man standing at the bottom.

On account of the motion of the earth a rock will not fall perfectly straight, but will bear to the east, lodging in the timber lining or perhaps bounding from wall to wall until it is broken up or caught by some projection.

A group of experimenters from the Michigan College of Mines has verified this by careful tests with steel balls. One ball was hung by a thread over a hole, about four feet from the east side, and the thread burned. A clay box had been placed at the bottom of the shaft to catch the ball, but it never appeared. Another ball was then dropped, by the same method, a little farther away from the east edge, and this ball, also, did not get to the bottom. Careful search located the first ball imbedded in the timbers eight hundred feet down, but the second ball never has been found.

As the earth revolves the surface is moving outward at a rate which varies with the latitude. Down in the earth the rate is not so fast, on the same principle that a point on the tire of a wheel revolves faster than one on a spoke. Consequently at the distance of a mile below the surface the speed rate is less than at the surface.

The falling ball continues to move toward the east at the same velocity it had on the earth's surface.
